"Klappentext When the Jews served the Golden Calf ...in the wilderness, ...the women refused to join them. Feminine Faith traces the roots of the feminine within the supernal realms, ...its relationship to women and how it translated into their aversion for unholy and ungodly worship. Why are women more sensitive than men to G-d's role in earthly events and His mastery over Creation? ...Rabbi Shmuel Schneersohn, fourth leader of Chabad-Lubavitch (1834-1882), explored G-d's unity and immanence in the world, and the innate sensitivity that women possess to spirituality. ...the Jewish people faithfully awaited Moses' descent from Mt. Sinai... a wave of panic struck when it was believed that he would not return. Amidst the confusion, a group came forward to make the outlandish proposition that the people begin worshiping a golden Calf. many were led astray, but the Jewish women stood firm. As a reward, G-d designated the holiday of Rosh Chodesh ... for Jewish women. This is the focus of the discourse delivered by the fourth Lubavitcher Rebbe, Rabbi Shmuel Schneersohn, on Rosh Chodesh Cheshvan 5640. Based on Talmudic and midrashic accounts, Rabbi Shmuel explains that the mixed multitude ...presumption that G-d is far too lofty to be involved in earthly affairs. The downfall of Egypt, they argued, was merely a result of Taurus, the bull, defeating its neighboring constellation, the Egyptian deity of Aries, the lamb. Rabbi Shmuel asks why the women rejected this scenario while so many men found it compelling? Kabbalah teaches that the source of the feminine soul is the sefirah of malchut, the spiritual plane that 'gives birth to all creation.' Because of their soul's root in malchut, women are sensitive to G-d's intimate involvement in worldly affairs ... reject the idolatrous argument that G-d is aloof from His creation...it was the Jewish women who stood fast in their belief that the Exodus and its miracles could not be attributed to any person in the world but G-d."
